Teaching Careers in Europe: Access, Progression and Support

The Eurydice report illustrates the main challenges at national level in teacher supply and demand and the ways education systems address them through forward planning.

It explores the requirements to become a teacher, recruitment and employment conditions, as well as prospects for professional development and support. It sets out career development opportunities for teachers, both in terms of hierarchical progression and diversification of tasks, as well as the situation concerning the definition and use of teacher competence frameworks.

The report analyses the roles and functioning of teacher appraisal. It also contributes to the body of evidence that can guide policy-making in providing effective support for teachers, enhance their professionalism and raise their status.

The report focuses on schools at primary and general secondary level. It covers all the countries of the European Union as well as Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Switzerland, Iceland, Liechtenstein, Montenegro, Norway, Serbia and Turkey.

Study on the EU Youth Strategy

Published by the European Parliamentary Research Service, the study analyses the EU Youth Strategy, established through the Council Resolution adopted in November 2009 on a renewed framework for European cooperation in the youth field for the period 2010-2018. Using the data available in various documents and sources on the implementation of the Youth Strategy, this study follows the structure of the Council Resolution, covering all fields of actions listed, as well as the types of measures introduced at the national level by Member States (strategy/policy/regulation/guidelines/programme/other) in order to assess the relation between its parts and their take-up to date by the main actors in EU youth policy. It presents a compilation of findings allowing the reader to understand how much has been done so far, and shows substantial evolution in the activity of the European Union and individual Member States, particularly in learning from best practices and undertaking joint projects.

Developing digital youth work - Policy recommendations, training needs and good practice examples for youth workers and decision-makers: expert group set up under the European Union Work Plan for Youth for 2016-2018

Published by the European Commission, the publication contains the main outcomes of the expert group on 'Risks, opportunities and implications of digitalisation for youth, youth work and youth policy' set up under the European Union Work Plan for Youth 2016-2018:

- A working definition of 'digital youth work';
- Examples of innovative practices in delivering digital youth work and upskilling youth workers' digital competences;
- Policy recommendations on the development of digital youth work;
- Identification of training needs of youth workers relevant for digital youth work, based on existing competence frameworks for digital skills and for youth work;
- Collection of training material which is available online and which addresses the identified training needs of youth workers relevant for digital youth work.

The results of this expert group will be of interest to anyone involved in developments in youth work in the 21st century, especially youth workers, organisations, training providers, policy-makers, other practitioners and researchers.

World Employment and Social Outlook – Trends 2018

The ILO's flagship report shows that, while the global unemployment rate is stabilising, unemployment and decent work deficits will stay at persistently high levels in many parts of the world. As the long-term global economic outlook remains modest despite stronger than expected growth in 2017, the report attributes the positive trend between 2017 and 2018 mainly to the strong performance of labour markets in developed countries, where the unemployment rate is projected to fall by an additional 0.2 percentage points in 2018 to reach 5.5 per cent, a rate below pre-crisis levels. In contrast, employment growth is expected to fall short of labour force growth in emerging and developing countries, but has nevertheless improved compared to 2016. The report highlights the fact that the significant progress achieved in the past in reducing vulnerable employment has essentially stalled since 2012. This means that almost 1.4 billion workers are estimated to be in vulnerable employment in 2017, and that an additional 35 million are expected to join them by 2019. In developing countries, vulnerable employment affects three out of four workers.

On a more positive note, the report notes that working poverty continues to fall in emerging countries, where the number of people in extreme working poverty is expected to reach 176 million in 2018, or 7.2 per cent of all employed people. Finally the report also highlights the fact that participation rates among women remain well below those for their male counterparts. Women are also more likely to face inferior quality of jobs and lower salaries.

Opportunities

Seeds for Integration Grants

Launched by the Organising Bureau of European School Student Unions (OBESSU), the project aims to provide small and large-scale funding to general and vocational secondary school students on local, regional and national levels to empower school students, regardless of where they come from, to take action in order to enhance the inclusion of their migrant and refugee peers into the school community and the secondary education environment and to raise awareness on a local, regional and national level on the issues migrant and refugee students are facing throughout their integration process.

Depending on what is the plan and level of activity, applications for grants can be sent under two possible pillars.

Pillar 1: for grass-root initiative of secondary school students or student union active on local, regional or national level, having a creative idea how to support the integration of pupils and students with refugee and migrant background. Depending on the size of the union and project idea the grant can be from 1,000 to 4,000 Euros.

Deadline is on rolling basis.

Pillar 2: for OBESSU Member, Candidate or Affiliate organisations, interested to implement the "Seeds for integration" project by promoting it so that even students living in rural areas and small towns know the project and can use the opportunities it is offering. Applicants' tasks would be to motivate them to apply and to help them in the application process for pillar 1. Activities include organising project management training, online consultations or helping with the translation of some of the ideas. The grant is up to 7,500 Euros.

Deadline to apply: 26th March 2018, 23:59 CET.

Commission to provide travel opportunities with educational and cultural value for young people

On 1st March, the European Commission took first steps to implement the European Parliament's proposal for a "Free Interrail pass for Europeans turning 18" by adopting a Financing Decision. With a budget of EUR 12 million in 2018, this action is expected to give an estimated 20,000-30,000 young people a travel experience that would help foster a European identity, reinforce common European values and promote the discovery of European sites and cultures. This proposal fits well with the EU's ambitions to promote learning mobility, active citizenship, social inclusion and solidarity of all young people. The action aims at offering young people, regardless of social or educational background and including people with reduced mobility, a chance to travel abroad. A promotion campaign to inform young Europeans turning 18 about this new opportunity will be organised and may include an open competition to select the first young people who will be travelling. The first participants are expected to travel this summer. They will do so by rail as a general rule, but alternative modes of transport should be available where necessary, taking into account environmental considerations, as well as time and distance.

MEPs supported solidarity action by young volunteers

In a European Parliament Committee on Culture and Education meeting held on 21st February, MEPs supported solidarity action by young volunteers. The "European Solidarity and Voluntary Service" (ESVS) supports young people to volunteer or work in EU-wide solidarity schemes, e.g. on education, health and environment. The initiative, endorsed by Members of the Culture and Education Committee will be the main entry-point of solidarity activities within the EU: 341.5 million Euros will be made available between 2018-2020, with 95% financing volunteering and 5% for traineeships and job placements. This will help participants to gain skills and knowledge for their future long-term prospects. The ESVS will support young people and non-profit organisations from all over Europe to engage in a wide range of solidarity-related activities related to education, health, protecting the environment, disaster prevention, provision of food and non-food items, reception and integration of migrants and asylum seekers. Young people should be over 18, but not more than 30 at the beginning of the volunteering or work activities, while hosting organisations have to be awarded the "ESVS quality label" in order to participate and ask for financing in the framework of the initiative. A multilingual and interactive web portal will be made available for both young people and organisations to advertise or search for volunteering, traineeships or job placements, but also to get language training, financial and administrative support, for example for travel, accommodation and health and social insurance, as well as post-placement support. It should also ensure that the quality of placements and participant organisations are evaluated. MEPs underlined the importance of giving an easy access to the programme to those with less opportunities, such as persons with disabilities, or those from isolated or marginalised communities, LGBT people, young people with learning or health difficulties. Members called for a clear distinction between volunteering activities and job placements, to ensure that no participating organisation uses young people as unpaid volunteers when potential quality jobs are available. Participant organisations should subscribe to a quality charter setting out agreed objectives and principles. To support young people, skills and competences acquired during their placement will be recognised and validated by a Youth Pass, including also the total number of hours volunteered. Participants should also benefit from specific administrative support and all the supplementary costs related to their participation is 100% financed by the programme. The text approved by the CULT Committee and the mandate to enter into negotiations with the Council and the European Commission should be confirmed by the plenary. After that, EP negotiators can begin talks for the final legislation.

EU long-term budget after 2020: European Commission sets out options – and their consequences

Ahead of the Informal Leaders' meeting on 23rd February 2018, the European Commission has set out various options, and their financial consequences, for a new and modern, long-term EU budget that delivers efficiently on its priorities after 2020. Providing opportunity for 1 in 3 young people to participate in ErasmusPlus would require an investment of €90 bln in the next EU Budget from 2021-2027.

New Director-General of DG Education, Youth, Sport and Culture

On 21st February, the European Commission appointed Ms Themis Christophidou new Director-General of DG Education, Youth, Sport and Culture.

A Cypriot national, who since November 2014 has been the Head of Cabinet of the Commissioner for Humanitarian Aid and Crisis Management Christos Stylianides, Ms Christophidou is the first Cypriot national to be appointed Director-General. Having served in the European Commission for over 17 years, including as the Deputy Head of Cabinet of the former Commissioner Androulla Vassiliou who was in charge of Education, Culture, Multilingualism and Youth, Ms Christophidou can draw on valuable experience and expertise for her new position and for the implementation of the Gothenburg Summit conclusions on education and culture. Ms Themis Christophidou took over Mrs Martine Reicherts' responsibilities for ensuring the execution of the political mandate, as well as reporting to the Commissioner, providing policy recommendations, and ensuring the management of the DG on a day-to-day basis.

Conclusions of the Education, Youth, Culture and Sport (EYCS) Council

On 15th February, ministers responsible for education, culture, youth, media, communication and sport from all EU member states gathered in Brussels and held a policy debate on a mid-term evaluation of the Erasmus+ programme and future orientations for post-2020.

During the debate, ministers underlined that Erasmus+ is one of the most successful Union programmes and an added value for Europe, since over the last thirty years more than nine million young Europeans have been able to benefit from the opportunity to study, train, teach or volunteer in another country.

According to ministers, the Erasmus+ programme should be made more inclusive and accessible and should include secondary school participants, vocational education and training learners and those coming from vulnerable social groups or remoted regions. For that purpose, Erasmus+ should be given adequate funding.

Erasmus+ should promote mobility and innovation and create synergies and be complementary with other Union instruments such as the European Social Fund. Administrative procedures should be simplified and harmonised.

Ministers also discussed how to take forward the Education aspects of the December European Council conclusions.

The Council reflected on how work should be developed to deliver on initiatives such as "European Universities", learning of languages, mutual recognition of diplomas and a "European student card".

They also exchanged views on those measures focussing on digitalisation and the need for lifelong-learning and innovative education and training.

First ERASMUS+ Master Student Loan agreement in Cyprus

The European Investment Fund (EIF) is working with the University of Cyprus to launch a new pilot scheme, allowing students to defer tuition fees and student accommodation rent payments accrued during the study period. This agreement will support students resident in any of the 32 other Erasmus+ Programme Countries to move to Cyprus in order to undertake their Masters programme at its university. The new EUR 4 million pilot scheme is expected to benefit more than 240 master students. The University of Cyprus will not require any collateral or third party guarantees and will offer the new programme at favourable conditions, for example a two-year grace period after the end of the studies and a minimum four-year repayment plan. The agreement between the EIF and the University of Cyprus is the first of its kind in Cyprus and benefits from the Erasmus+ loan guarantee scheme, funded by the European Union and managed by EIF.

Debrecen, Győr and Veszprém shortlisted for the title of European Capital of Culture 2023 in Hungary

Debrecen, Győr and Veszprém were shortlisted for the title of European Capital of Culture 2023 in Hungary. The recommendation was made by a panel of independent experts evaluating applications from 7 competing Hungarian cities at the outcome of a 3-day meeting in Budapest.

Once the panel's recommendation has been confirmed by the relevant Hungarian authorities, cities will have until early next autumn to complete their application. The panel will then meet again in Budapest at the end of 2018 to recommend which Hungarian city should become European Capital of Culture in 2023. Hungary will host the European Capital of Culture for the second time in 2023, after Pécs in 2010.

21st March 2018: Towards more exchanges for pupils, Brussels, Belgium

The highly positive impact of learning mobility on youth has been proven, recognised and supported via concrete measures and programmes that demonstrate Europe's willingness to place learning mobility high on the educational and youth agendas. Despite this, in many Member States, mobility of pupils and of families with school-age children is hindered in practice by a poorly enabling legal framework. This means that often students need to attend one or more additional year(s) of school, once back in their home country. The debate will focus on how unleash the potential of pupil mobility in Europe and recognise study periods abroad and increase the opportunities under Erasmus+.
